Career Corner

By Adam Mayer, MA, GCDF, CPRW, Director, University College Career and Academic Programming

Positive workplace culture has become something of a “must-have” for today’s job-seekers. Gone are the days of going with the mundane flow, accepting inhospitable work environments, due in large part to the Great Reshuffle, where half of American workers left their jobs and made a career change.

Aside from feeling valued, safe and happy at work, positive workplace culture includes respect for work-life boundaries, the provision of professional development opportunities and prioritization of mental well-being. LinkedIn offers plenty of insights on these, and other hallmarks of positive workplace culture.

Alumni Spotlights

Nancy Erika Smith '77 Legal Hawk

Nancy Erika Smith '77 has scaled the heights of her profession as a civil rights lawyer who, since the age of 25, has been breaking ground and making news, winning cases for those who face discrimination based on age, race, gender, sexual orientation or disability. Smith, who has argued before the U.S. Supreme Court, is perhaps most famous for her role in the sexual harassment suit that resulted in Roger Ailes being fired from Fox News, but she has many wins in her column starting with Slohoda vs. United Parcel Service, which ultimately rewrote the law on marital status discrimination. Lou Gilleran '79 Captain of Destiny

When Lou Gilleran '79 says he has an “interesting background,” the physician and retired Navy captain is really underselling himself. A foster child in his teens, he navigated college and career choices alone, worked construction to help pay for college and still found time to play sports. Today, Gilleran lives in San Diego, where he practices internal and preventive medicine part time and is also part of the San Diego Sheriff’s Department team that provides medical care for inmates.
